

Dr. Casey L. Blaine

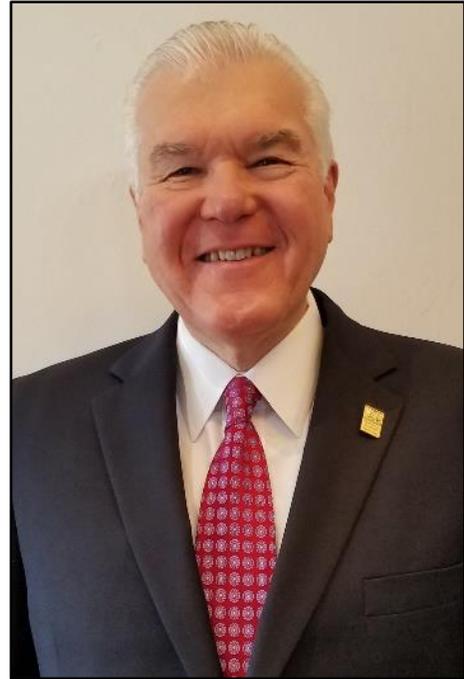

Dr. Casey L. Blaine is the President of the Quantitative Results Foundation whose mission is to help nonprofits quantify their process results, so they become more effective for their clients.

His 46 years of military, federal government, and academia experience enabled him to develop knowledge and insights to pinpoint key processes and their tangible benefits then teach others how to use the same techniques to develop sound organizational results. He has also taught undergraduate, graduate, and doctoral courses at the college and university level.

Casey's varied experiences include graduating from the Federal Government's Excellence in Government Leadership Program as well as holding an Airline Transport Pilot Certificate. His recent speaking engagements at the U.S. Army's Cyber Command and the Joint Special Operations University both highlighted his passion for results-based action.

As the previous Faculty & Staff (F&S) Development Division Chief at Ft Sill, OK, he created the U.S. Army's premier F&S program recognized as the best throughout the United States Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC). His influence led the Army to revise its basic instructor training and curriculum developer courses.

In November 2016 he earned Gold Level Kirkpatrick Four Levels® Evaluation Certification.
