

Gerald Jones

Gerald Jones is a Kirkpatrick Certified Facilitator with over a decade of training development and facilitation experience.

Gerald is currently a Senior Cyber Security Trainer with Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC) and is primarily responsible for teaching Cyber Security skills to U.S. Military personnel. He has over 20 years of military experience across two service branches (8 years U.S. Marine Corps Infantry and 12 years U.S. Air Force Intelligence Analysis), and he continues to manage training development and instruction teams in the California Air National Guard.

Gerald has developed and delivered training for the U.S. Air Force Intelligence Community on subjects ranging from critical thinking to multi-cultural understanding and integration.

Gerald has successfully implemented the Kirkpatrick training evaluation methodology for three different Air Force units by forging partnerships between operations, training, and evaluation components to successfully infuse key drivers for mission accomplishment into the planning, design, and execution of training programs.

Gerald is a Certified Professional in Talent Development. He earned his Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from Nebraska Wesleyan, is a Myers-Briggs Type Indicator Certified Practitioner, and Association for Talent Development Master Trainer. He expertly leverages his dual backgrounds in Business Administration and Talent Development to further promote trainers' roles as strategic business partners within corporate, not-for-profit, and government organizations. Gerald is Kirkpatrick certified at the bronze, silver, and gold levels.
